

Kimbal Musk is a restaurateur and philanthropist. His personal mission is to pursue an America where everyone has access to real food. Kimbal has been named a Global Social Entrepreneur by the World Economic Forum. He is the co-founder of three businesses—The Kitchen, Big Green and Square Roots—with real food missions that are rapidly scaling across the U.S.

The Kitchen Restaurant Group, including Next Door and Hedge Row, serve real food at every price point. The restaurants source food from American farmers, stimulating the local farm economy to the tune of millions of dollars a year. Kimbal's non-profit organization, Big Green, builds permanent, outdoor Learning Garden classrooms in hundreds of underserved schools across America reaching over 300,000 students every day. His urban, indoor vertical farming accelerator, Square Roots, seeks to empower thousands of young entrepreneurs to become real food farmers.

Kimbal's early entrepreneurial ventures were in the technology and software industries, including start-ups in partnership with his brother, Elon Musk. Kimbal is on the board for Chipotle, Tesla and SpaceX.
